Formation and Growth of Washington's Popular Military Organiza-tion - Names on the Roll of Officers Fifty Years Ago.

At the meeting of the Washington Light Infantry Corps last evening a letter was read from Mr. Charles Ebert, an honorary member, presenting to the officers and members a copy of an early painting of an officer of the organization. The picture was discovered in of the place. an old military publication by Mr. Ebert during a resent visit to New York and was borrowed for the purpose of reproduction, which was accomplished by Captain C. H. Ourand of the W. L. L. C. The text, which accompanied the picture, will be found

In the summer of 1836 the District of Columbia presented an aspect before unknown and never anticipated—the seat of the General Government, where an ion-mense outlay had been caused in the crection of splendid public edifices, with an armory, arsenal and navy-yard, left without protection, the small force generally stationed there having been withdrawn to Florida, and a community without arms, by which they could defend their own or the public property from destruction, or protect their lives in case of danger, which from some secret cause was at one time more than imaginary. It was then that, seeing the necessity of adopting some measure for their own safety in case of danger, and that a feeling of security which a well-drilled body of men, completely armed and ready at a moment's notice, never fails to impart, might be felt by the citizens. By the excritons of two or three patriote individuals signatures were obtained toward the catabilshunch of a volunteer corps, which was formed and organized under the name of the Washington Light Infantry.

Public opinion was decidedly opposed to it on the ground that it had ceased to be an experiment, on account of the numerous companies which had sprung into existence within a few years and vanished almost as soon as formed, and they were led to regard this attempt only as a fifth edition of what had gone before.

The difficulty of obtaining arms was likewise a serious obstacle, the quota allotted to the District baving been more than exhausted by being placed in the hands of companies which preceded us, and by whom they were lost or destroyed.

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY.

To repeated applications for them a refusal had been given, nor would they have eventually been obtained but for the serious apprehension felt by the citizens, and which were far from groundless, being made known to the proper authority.
These difficulties, with others which might be mentioned, having been set aside, the apathy and want of energy which they neutrally imparted to those who at first were most auxious to form a company was entirely removed, when it was understood that a military display would be made in entirely removed, when it was understood that a military display would be made in Washington by a part of the volunteer force of Baltimore, to whom an invitation had been extended by the Washington Branch Rai road (for the first time before or since) of a trip to Washington, compilmentary to them for the prompt and efficient aid they had rendered the company in quelling the disturbances which had arisen between the laborers on the line.

a compilment to our Baltimore friends, the 19th of September was adopted as the anni-versary of the company. Since that time our progress has been on-ward, and we have now gained a stand, both in the estimation of the community and in the material of the corps, which must insure its permanence and success.

On the 5th of June, 1837, the company made its first excursion by visiting Baltimore, where it was received in a manner, not only highly gratifying to every member, but worthy of the Monumental City.

In June, 1838, Washington was collivened by the appearance in her streets of a volunteer corps from Norfolk (the Norfolk Riffemen), who were escorted about by the Light Infantry.

Riffemen), who were escorted about by the Light Infantry.

After their departure, in consequence of the flattering and pressing invitations extended to us by them, we determined, early in the fall, to return their visit, which was accordingly done, and in September the company partook of the justly famed hospitality of the Old Dominion. CHANGE IN THE COMMAND.

CHANGE IN THE COMMAND.

In the spring of 1839 Captain Blake resigned the command of the company, and First Lieutenant R. France was unanimously chosen to succeed him. Under Captain France the company determined to visit Philadelphia, which they had had, for some time in contemplation, and on the 10th of June they left Washington on the morning train, and in the afternoon they were received into line in Philadelphia amid an immense concourse of citizens assembled to welcome them. There their reception was most flattering.

Every thing that the most refined taste and extended hospitality could suggest was done to render their stay in the highest degree delightful. Work of art and places of amusement, which abound in that city, were all thrown open for their inspection and gratification, and on every hand they saw and felt the welcome, which a generous and enthusiastic people most cordially extended to them.

This trip forms a distinct era in the history of the company, an era which will always be referred to by them with gratitude and pleasure; and not by the members of the company only, but by the citizens of Washington generally, for the reason that they esteem it, not the reception of a volunteer corps alone, but the reception of themselves also, through the Light Infantry, acting as a sort of representative body of the District.

Several chauges have been experienced by the company, but such changes only as body of the District.

Several changes have been experienced by the company, but such changes only as all volunteer corps must experience; yet they are now in a more prosperous condition than ever, numbering at least eighty strong, and still on the increase. The following is the present organization of the corps: Richard France, captain; first licetenant, John Mills; second licetenant J. P. McKean, quartermaster A. R. Clayton.

Arrested in an Opium Joint. Detective Horne last night arrested Sadje Black, who is wanted in Philadelphia for grand larceny. The police have been on the lookout for her about a week, and, with the assistance of a description furnished by Chief Wood of the Philadelphia detective office, she was found in a house on Eleventh street last night. Judge Miller of Frank Cronin this morning in the Police Court. "Well, I don't know whether I am or met. I don't know how the chicken get under my coat. It must have come up my breeches leg."

"You can go to jail for thirty days," said the Judge, and the fellow went back to the cell.

BLAINE'S UNLUCKY HOUSE. Thirty Years of Evil Pate Hovers About Its Walls.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.-The death of Mrs. Coppinger, Secretary Blaine's daughter, directs attention anew to the unlucky house in which the Blaine's live. The house is the old Beward mansion, and in it Mr. Blaine has met his keenest personal sorrows. There were fears of calamity overtaking him or his family when it was announced that he had leased the old building, and gossip, superstitious and tragic, was heard among all who knew the history

Had it been a haunted house, had chosts been seen there in convention. here could not have been more talk Some folks there were, though, who believed that the luck of Blaine would offset everything, and when on, the sec-ond Wednesday of last month, the family of the Secretary of State gave a recep-tion to their hosts of friends, and the coms were filled with a gay, fortune favored throng, the protestants against superstition declared that the spell, if ever there were any, was broken. Yet within a week the eldest son of the Secretary, Walker Blaine, felt sick and died. That made talk about the and died. That made talk about the house, and people said it was an unlucky spot. Now Mrs. Coppinger, Blaine's daughter, is dead, and once more the story of calamity is told. There may be something, there may be nothing, in the tale of superstition, but certain it is that if the house was in the real extent market today it mould. in the real estate market to day it would be long before it got a taker. The house stands on Lafayette Square. It was built before the war, and one of its occupants was Secretary

Spencer Upon his family the evil spirits of the house first visited their fate. The Secretary's son was a licutenant in the Navy, and while his father was in the Navy, and while his father was in the house his son was hanged to the yard-arm of his ship for his alleged participation in a mutiny. Then the Washington Club had the place during President Buchanan's administration. The men about town belonged to the club, and Philip Barton Key, the reckless, adventurous District Attorney of the District of Columbia, was one of the District of Columbia, was one of the members. There had long been talk connecting him with the handsome wife of General Sickles, then a Representative in Congress.

The Sickles' house was on Lafayette

Square, and one February morning, when the sun was shining, a handker-chief was seen fluttering from one of the windows in the house of General Sickles. Young Key answered it and started business. stepped buoyantly up the square. Sickles, who had seen the signals, caught him in front of the house, and, in a moment, Key lay on the walk wounded to death. It is only a few years since the tree against which he Sccretary Seward next occupied the place. On April 14, 1865, while he lay ill in bed, a man came to the house saying he had been ordered to fetch some medicine and deliver it in person to Mr. Seward. This was denied him, but the stranger knocked down Fred erick W. Seward and a servant, rushed nto the Secretary's room and tried to kill him with a dagger. He was cap-tured, but he escaped and rode off on his horse, which had been standing in the street. His name was Lewis Payne. the street. His name was Lewis Payne, and after a while he was caught and put to death. The War Department, fearing that other attempts might be made to assassinate Mr. Seward, ordered that a sentry patrol before the house night and day. This was done, and for four years was continued, even though for a long part of the time the Sewards were not there.

m less than three weeks we were ready to parade, and did parade, on the morning of the 12th with forty-five men.

The following were the officers who had been elected on the 26th of August previous: Captain, John A. Blake; first Lieutenant, R. France; second lieutenant, Wm. H. Mauro; third lieutenant, John Mills. As a compilingent to a week week we were ready to parade were not there.

Next the mansion was taken by Secretary Belknap. He had not been there long before his wife died. That ended the occupancy of the house as a residence. The Government rented it and used it for the Commissary-General's office. When the Commissary-General's office. When the Commissi staff was moved to the new building of the War Department the house was left evil fates by taking it until Mr. Blaine

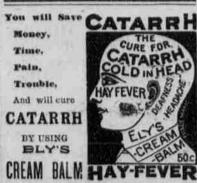

He tore down the partitions that made rooms where the attempted Seward assassination had occurred, and with a lavish spending of money transformed the musty old office apartments and made them beautiful with the furnishings of a rich man's home. But the decorations have seemed more like those of a tomb, and men want to know what will be next in the series of misfortunes that appear to come to those who inhabit this historic home.

BIRDS THAT WON'T WASH.

The Colors of Their Feathers Are Not At the present moment the menageric of the Zeological Society, Regent's Park, has an unusually large number of touracos, a species of birds which has not before been exhibited in that Touraco, as "Chambers" Journal" explains, is the native name of a beautiful group of birds peculiar to Africa, and sometimes called from their food, plantain eaters. They are generally supposed to be allied to the cuckoos, and they are not altogether unlike some of them in their external characters. An African traveler ob-served so long ago as 1818 that the plantain caters, during keavy showers, hide themselves in the thickest foliage, as if they had a special dread of getting

There is nothing particularly remarkable about this; in fact, many birds show a dislike to getting wet feathers, but the touracos have a much better reason for this dislike than most other birds. M. Verreaux, the traveler referred to, discovered the reason when he attempted to catch a touraco which was sheltering itself during a storm of rain. He found that when he grasped the feathers the brilliant crimson color-ing matter stained his hands and later discovered that the feathers could be washed almost white.

To find colors that "run" in the feathers of a bird is most unexpected. and it is not surprising to hear that one naturalist who purchased some skins thought himself to have been deceived with artificially-painted birds. The touraco is shot and falls into a pool it stains the surrounding water not so much with its blood as with the red dye from its wing feathers. Touracos are not, however, entirely colored by this peculiar substance; they have a great deal of green about them, and this green is due to the presence of a green pigment which appears to be convertible

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of urio D acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony : -

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflatmatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

boiling. The green pigment, unlike the red, is a "fast" color. Most birds that are colored green ow this color, at least partly, to fine mark-ings upon the feathers, and all "metal-lic" colors, such as the brilliant greens. blues and reds of the humming birds, are due to optical effects caused by the structure of the feathers, and have nothing to do with any pigment of the same color within the substance of the feathers. There are thus two sources of color among birds, and it is a remarkable fact that in many cases where the male birds have a brilliant colora ion and the females are soberly cla the color is a "mechanically" caused color; for instance, in the humming birds. The touracos do not show this lifference between the sexes; the female resembles her mate, and there is no superiority on either side, but an abso-

A Dissertation on American Wines.

It is now universally conceded by even the most fanatical teetotalers that a glass of thoroughly matured and pure wine is the most wholesome, health and strength-giving beverage for mankind. Almost every State—no matter how cold its climate—produces grapes from which wine is pressed, but THE PARADENA WINES are made from those luscions SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA grapes which attain the highest grade of maturity and ripeness and are therefore the best wines in the market.
